The manifestations of particular were remarkable in themselves, but they were overshadowed by the evidences of a deep religious feeling on the part of the assembled multitude. During the celebration aeroplanes tude. During the celebration aeroplanes circled in the air over the Koenigsplatz, and the hum of their motors could be heard constantly above the sounds of thousands of voices.

Every inch of the great square, from the Glyptothek to the Art Museum and from the Propylaen to the Arcistrasse, was filled with the great crowds. With bared heads the people stood in the light of the setting sun, and before giving expression to the national pride in the success of German arms in Poland a fervent prayer went up to God.

The Te Deum was followed by the singing of another choral. Detachments of police and firemen had been ordered to the square to preserve

For two hours previous to this time crowds had been streaming from all directions to the Koenigsplatz bedecked with flags for the occasion. At half past seven, to the accompaniment of a military band which had taken up its position restaurant in the city was filled to overflowing and the streets were jammed with people waving flags. This was the informal part of the celebration. So far as the number of participants concerned it exceeded the demonstrations following the fall of Przemysl and Lemberg.
